$8,000 FAMILY INCOME OF ALL OSAGE INDIANS

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Dec. 12.—The income of the Osage Indians of Oklahoma soon will be greatly increased, when 20,000 acres of additional oil lands, belonging to these tribesmen, are leased by the Government and operations upon them begin.

The Osages are the only Indians in Oklahoma who have retained their tribal relations. All their unallotted property and income is held on a communal basis, and each Indian, even though of only one-sixteenth Osage blood, receives an equal share of the oil and gas royalties and other payments. Since every man, woman, and child is considered a citizen, the income of an infant is the same as that of the adult.

There are 2,575 members of the Osage tribe, and each one of them receives in oil and gas royalties and interest an income of $400 every three months. It can be easily figured that the annual income of an Osage Indian family of five members would be $8,000.
